

20 — Ancestries (the catalog)

The full roster of playable ancestries. Character creation (02-character-creation.md) keeps a six-race starter set and points here for the rest — the same way it points to 19-classes.md for the class roster.

How an ancestry works

Pick one ancestry. It gives you exactly two things, at level 1:

- +1 to one ability (fixed per ancestry — a nudge toward a role, never a lock). The lone exception is the Human, whose +1 goes anywhere.
- One Racial Signature — a single trait. It is one of your two level-1 signatures (the other is your Class Signature, 19-classes.md). You get exactly one, always.

A "trait" here is a small bundle, not a single clause — look at the classics: the Dwarf's is "darkvision and advantage vs. fear/charm," the Elf's is "dim-light sight and advantage on Perception." Every trait below is tuned to that same power level. No ancestry stacks two traits; the catalog is large because families have many members, not because anyone gets more.

Families are flavor, not a mechanical layer. "Elf" or "Dragonborn" is a grouping for browsing. You choose one member (e.g., Wood Elf) and get its one ability and one trait. There is no "base trait + subrace trait."

The trait toolbox (for the GM building new ancestries)

Every trait is built from effects already in the game. The legal palette:

- Advantage on a named skill, or on a defense vs. a condition (fear, charm, Poisoned...).
- A sense — dim-light sight, or darkvision (see in the dark ~30 ft).
- 1/rest: reroll a d20; or drop to 1 HP instead of 0.
- Movement: Speed 8; a swim or climb speed; breathe water; move through larger creatures' spaces; ignore a kind of difficult terrain; glide (no fall damage).
- Resistance to one damage type (take half).
- Pack Tactics — advantage on attacks while an ally is adjacent to your target.
- Innate magic — know one cantrip (cast with your primary, 0 mana), or a specific 1/rest Lesser spell (e.g., Misty Step), no mana.
- Breath weapon — 1/rest, a Close 2-square cone; roll d20 + primary vs. each creature's Armor for 2d6 of an element.
- Natural weapon — claws / horns / bite, a 1d6 weapon you always carry (uses your primary).
- Flat +1 to a static defense (e.g., natural +1 Armor — bounded, like Bulwark).
- A narrow immunity (can't be magically slept; immune to disease) or cosmetic shapeshift.

The fundamentals stay off-limits. No racial bonus to attack rolls, to the training bonus, or to mana-pool size; no extra action; no stacking +1 s on a d20. Flat bonuses to static defenses are fine. If a homebrew trait would touch one of those, it's out.

What ancestry doesn't decide

- Your class. The +1 nudges, it doesn't gate — a Might-favoring Orc can be a caster; a Charisma Tiefling can swing a greataxe.
- Your pool, perks, or signatures-beyond-the-racial. Those come from class and level (19-classes.md, 03-progression.md).
- Language, age, height as stats. Flavor only (02-character-creation.md).

If a player wants an ancestry not listed, the GM builds one from the toolbox above: +1 to one ability + one trait of comparable power. That's the whole recipe.
